GENERAL NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Banking and Railroad Combinations

New York, Nov 26—It was officially announced this afternoon that negotiations pending for some time past between [illegible] and domestic bankers represented by Drexel, Morgan & Co of New York and J S Morgan & Co, of London and Wm H Vanderbilt for the purchase of $2[illegible] of New York Central stock were successfully concluded to-day. It is understood that the bankers take $15,000,000 now with an option on $10,000,000 additional at 1 20. Mr Vanderbilt retains his control of the New York Central. Mr Field will control the Wabash [illegible], which road close connections will be had, and Mr Pierrepont will represent the English interest. A rumor is that a combination similar to the Pennsylvania railway combination will be formed taking in the New York Central Lake Shore Canada South[illegible], Wabash, and Kansas City and Northern [illegible].

Marine Disasters.

New York, Nov 26—It is reported here that the mail steamship Bellona Capt Pot[illegible], from Montreal and Quebec was driven ashore during a terrible gale at Lake St [illegible]. No further particulars could be obtained owing to a tremendous heavy sea running.

The mail steamer Albert, from Pictou Nova Scotia, is reported wrecked on one of the [illegible] islands. Reports say that the passengers and crew were all saved.

The Linck-Sprague Suit

New York, Nov. 26—The court room was [illegible] with people to-day when the suit of Linck against Mrs Kate Sprague was [illegible]. Linck was tutor for Mrs Sprague's [illegible] Willie, at the time of the recent troubles [illegible] Canonchet in which Senator Conkling [illegible] and sues for $250 salary and expenses [illegible] out his engagement as tutor. [illegible] of defendant to the complaint [illegible] that the agreement with Linck was [illegible] her capacity of married woman, [illegible] her husband is responsible for [illegible], and that Gov Sprague had full [illegible] of the engagement with Linck. [illegible] came up to-day on notice of motion [illegible] for Mrs Sprague for the counsel [illegible] show by what means he expects [illegible] the fact of the married woman act. [illegible] of the argument a letter was [illegible] Mrs. Sprague to Linck to show that [illegible] him in her employ and con[illegible] that the professor made his exit [illegible] Sprague mansion at the end of a [illegible]. The judge took the papers and re[illegible].

[illegible] St. Louis School House—Panic Among the Children.

[illegible] Nov 26—Between 10 and 11 [illegible] morning fire was discovered in [illegible] floor of the Webster school at the [illegible] 11th and Jefferson streets; the [illegible] school building in the [illegible] school fire alarm was immediately [illegible] the teachers and scholars throughout [illegible] building were apprised of the danger. [illegible] on the ground floor got out [illegible] in good order, but those on the [illegible] were seized with a panic and [illegible] and shrieking in terror to the [illegible] which they hurled themselves [illegible] greatest confusion. The pressure was [illegible] on the stairs between the second and [illegible] that the bannister gave way and children were precipitated to the floor. [illegible] child had an arm broken, one [illegible] hurt about the head and another [illegible]. Mrs Ballasagar, a teacher [illegible] efforts to stay the rushing tide [illegible] of the stairs was hurled from her [illegible] upon and borne to the bottom [illegible] was dragged out very much [illegible] not seriously hurt. The fire was [illegible] affair and soon mastered.

The "Alabama" Rescues the Crew of the ship "Svea."

[illegible] York, Nov. 26.—The steamship State [illegible] rescued the crew of the ship Svea, [illegible] for Antwerp with palm oil. The [illegible] much exhausted from exposure and [illegible] water and food. One was washed [illegible] a few hours before the Alabama [illegible] sight. While taking in the lifeboat [illegible] steamer the sea smashed it into pieces [illegible] the third officer and two seamen [illegible] water. Ropes and life buoys were thrown to them and they hauled [illegible] on board. The steamship also [illegible] large quantity of wreck stuff and a [illegible] number of petroleum barrels.

[illegible] Practice in Maine—Democrats Fixing the Returns.

[illegible], Nov. 26—The Whig will to-morrow morning state that Boselle of the republican [illegible] committee, has obtained positive evidence that the democratic managers have secretly substituting altered and amended [illegible] contrary to law. The constitution and laws require that the returns sent to [illegible] secretary of state by the town clerk shall be [illegible] and sealed up at the town meeting. [illegible] of the Whig, will assert his conviction that the clerk of a certain democratic [illegible] one of the threatened counties for [illegible] his return immediately after election, [illegible] accordance with his record—as late as the second week in November. This [illegible] was informed by other town officers [illegible] prominent democrat requested new returns to be made, as there was some trouble [illegible] returns from that and other democratic towns. The clerk did make a new return which was forwarded about the middle of November, in which he corrected the [illegible] and supplied the omissions complained of although the town record shows them as they appeared in the original return.

Clearinghouse Returns—Immense Business

New York, Nov 26—The clearinghouse [illegible] for the week again show a marvelous [illegible] of business which, because of the [illegible] stock speculation in New York are believed to be unprecedented. The increase [illegible] except as is usual recently in San Francisco. The decrease there from last year [illegible] per cent. Louisville also shows a decrease of 13 10 per cent, according to the [illegible] table. All other towns show an increase this week over the same time [illegible] year as follows: New York [illegible]; Boston, 71 9; Philadelphia 30 5; Chicago [illegible]; Baltimore, 41 8; Cincinnati, 21 4; [illegible] Louis 19; New Orleans 11 7; Milwaukee 33; Pittsburg 26 9; Providence [illegible]; Kansas City, 39; Cleveland 60 2; Indianapolis [illegible]; New Haven 31 9; Lowell [illegible]; Syracuse 89. The grand aggregate total footings of all clearing houses $1,021,000,000 this week against $631,000,000 for the same time last year, over one hundred and six per cent. [illegible]. San Francisco's figures for this time [illegible] year are thirteen millions and eight and three quarter millions.

The Hayden Murder Case

New Haven, Nov 26—In the Hayden case [illegible] Friedweld was the only witness examined. The defense demanded that the [illegible] of the deceased girl on which it was alleged that foot prints would be found should be brought into court. The court refused to order this. The defense then issued a subpœna ordering Dr White to bring it into the court. This was done. The state, rather than have the remains exhibited in court withdrew all testimony relative to nail prints.

New York Treasury Matters.

New York, Nov 26—An Albany dispatch to the Tribune says Mr Wendell the newly elected state treasurer has declared that he should not assume office until the books [illegible] used during the years of Mackin's administration had been examined and the story of [illegible] administration in the [illegible]. The trouble seems to have been that [illegible] treasurer Mackin called checks cash [illegible], when the comptroller called a ten [illegible]

THE SPOFFORD-KELLOGG INVESTIGATION

This time the Other Fellow Lied—Conflicting Testimony from Louisiana Politicians.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

New Orleans, Nov 26—In the Kellogg-Spofford investigation to-day, Charles S Abel formerly chief clerk of the returning board, and now employed in the custom house testified that he never saw Kellogg in the [illegible] of the board.

Vincent Dickinson a member of the Packard legislature referred to by Dreius as being the same day after Kellogg's election, denied the statement made by Dreius and says that he was not paid nor promised anything for voting for Kellogg. Tom Murray came to witness and wanted him to state that he had been paid for voting for Kellogg, Murray giving the witness to understand that there was money in it. Witness declined the offer.

Geo A I Swasey testified that he had never made an affidavit against Kellogg and consequently Kellogg could not have given him $500 to go back on his affidavit as sworn to by Bernard Williams. In Washington, Murray told witness that he wanted Janitor Ladd's place in the customhouse, if not he wanted the republicans to pay him $2,500 to keep his mouth shut as he could make that much out of the democrats. The witness was a member of the packed legislature from West Feliciana parish and received about 800 votes and his democratic opponent about 1200. Witness was declared elected by the returning board. He and others made affidavits about bulldozing. General and systematic bulldozing was carried on in the parish during 1876. The colored people were murdered and whipped because of their political sentiments, and were forced to vote the democratic ticket. My own relatives were not allowed to vote for me. I am satisfied that if there had been no bulldozing the republicans would have had about 900 majority in the parish. Witness testified a great length as to the outrages committed by the whites. He referred to the killing of Webber and another republican who returned to the parish after the election. Witness concluded that it would not be safe for him to return though his family live there and has not been in the parish for two years.

Cross-examined by Senator Hill—Witness admitted that he had been charged with murdering a respectable citizen in West Feliciana parish but the senator could not get an admission of the witness that this charge of murder and his readiness to fight caused the people there to consider him a bad man and for this reason did not want him to return. Witness insisted that the objection to him was on account of politics.

Aristide De Joie a member of the Packard legislature—Was not inside the state house after the meeting in January, and consequently could not have been in Judge Dibble's office as stated by A W Flanigan, never received money from any one to vote for Kellogg. Flanigan's testimony as far as it relates to me, is untrue.

Jeff Stokes, porter in the Packard legislature testified that he knew Thomas of Bossier was present on the day of Kellogg's election. The democrats claimed that Thomas was absent.

Gen Thomas C Anderson testified: The statement made by Bernard Williams that he (Anderson) had employed him as a detective or to go to Washington in the interest of Kellogg is false. Kellogg was never present to my knowledge at an executive meeting of the returning board. Don't think Kellogg's name was signed to any protest.

THE IRISH TRIALS.

Great Popular Excitement at Sligo in Favor of the Agitators—General Proceedings.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Sligo Nov 25—The town was on the verge of riot last night and the police had to clear the streets. They were stoned and made several arrests. Davitt was serenaded by two bands. The police paraded the streets this morning. Further reinforcements have arrived. No fresh disturbances have occurred, and it is thought that the government intends to remove the trials of the prisoners to Dublin instead of taking them to the county assizes. A larger number of magistrates were on the bench to-day than hitherto. Killen's examination is proceeding. Davitt and Daly are present as spectators. Davitt has telegraphed to Newcastle that he will keep his engagements to speak here on Sunday and Monday and will attend a monster meeting at Glasgow. Mourse, queen's counsel said that Killen being a barrister might lead the people to believe that they could act upon his advice. He made a long quotation from Killen's speech at a meeting on which he (Mourse) relied for Killen's committal to the effect that "he would like nothing better than to see thousands of men coming over the mountains, rifle in hand." He showed that others who were present at the meeting had remonstrated against Killen's counseling physical force. Rees made a long, rambling speech for the defence and was ordered by the bench to sit down. Shorthand reporters and others were then examined.

WASHINGTON CITY

Prospect of Settlement with the Utes.

Washington, Nov 25—Secretary Schurz received the following telegram this morning:

Los Pinos Agency Nov 21

We have information that the White river Utes are on their way including Jack. We are now of opinion that we shall be successful in carrying out your wishes. At all events we have patience enough to try it. So far as danger is concerned the commission have not given that a thought. They must take chances.

HATCH Commissioner

The latter portion of the dispatch is in reply to a telegram from Secretary Schurz in which he said to the commissioners that if they have reason to think themselves in danger they must follow their own judgment in taking such steps as their safety may require.

Favorable Showing.

Washington, Nov 26—The excess of value of exports over imports of merchandise for October is $40,067,8[illegible], the largest in the history of the country. The excess of imports of gold and silver into the country over exports from July 1st to November 22d amounted to about $65,000,000.

CIVIL DAMAGE ACT.

Subjoined is a copy of the act passed by the legislature of Washington territory at the recent session to make the vendor of intoxicating liquors liable for damages caused by sale of the same:

Be it enacted, etc. Section 1. Every husband, wife child, parent guardian employer or other person who shall be injured in person or property or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication, habitual or otherwise of any person shall have a right of action in his or her own name severally or jointly against any person or persons who shall by selling, or giving intoxicating liquors have caused the intoxication in whole or in part of such person and any person or persons owning, renting leasing or permitting the occupation of any building or premises, and having knowledge that intoxicating liquors are to be sold therein, or who have leased the same for other purposes shall knowingly permit therein the sale of any intoxicating liquors that have caused, in whole or in part, the intoxication of any person, be liable severally or jointly with the persons selling or giving the intoxicating liquors as aforesaid for all damages sustained and the same may be recovered in a civil action in any court of competent jurisdiction. A married woman may bring such action in her own name, all damages recovered by her shall inure to her separate use and all damages recovered by a minor under this act shall be paid either to such minor or to such person in trust for him, and on such terms as the court may direct. In case of the death of either party the action and right of action to or against his executor or administrator shall survive.

Sec 2. No license for the sale of intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted without the consent in writing of the owner or lessor of the building, or premises in which the business is to be conducted and the paper containing such written consent shall be kept on file by the officer issuing such license.

Sec 3. Any owner or lessor of real estate who shall pay any money on account of his liability incurred under this act for any act of his tenant may in a civil action recover of such tenant the money so paid.

Sec 4. This act shall be so construed as to make any owner or lessor of any building or premises held under lease at the date of the passage of this act liable under the provisions hereof for any damages resulting from the lawful sale or giving away of spirituous or intoxicating liquors on said premises during the term of said lease.

Simon Cameron's Tribute to Chandler

[Washington Dispatch to the Philadelphia Press

Senator Simon Cameron on his return with Senator Blaine on Saturday from the funeral of the late Senator Chandler, in conversation with a friend on the train said that in the death of Mr Chandler the republican party lost one of its most aggressive and fearless leaders—that to him perhaps the party was more indebted for its success in the elections of the present year than to any other one man; that in his speeches in the last extra session he struck the key note and aroused the people of the north to the real issues and dangers which menace the country through the revolutionary designs of the southern leaders in congress; that his electrifying midnight speech in the senate on the proposition of the democrats to pension Jeff Davis diverted the public mind from the local issues and turned attention to the designs of the south should they get control of the executive as they have of the legislative department of the government. The ex senator said that the more intimate friends of the late senator were convinced that the cause of his death was over exertion in the late campaign as he had spoken in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Illinois and was on his way to fill an engagement on the [illegible] state.

Kype and Saluskin, two of the Perkins Murderers Hanged at Yakima City on Saturday Last

The Former Makes a Statement Showing the Manner of their Recent Attack on Sheriff York and Laying the Blame on Moostanic

He Disclaims against the Iniquity of Capital Punishment—Saluskin makes a Brief Statement

[illegible] OREGONIAN [illegible]

[illegible] CITY [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Kype [illegible] the murderers of the Perkins family [illegible] to-day at the [illegible] the sheriff Mr Schnebly [illegible] presence of a large and [illegible] of the [illegible] of the Indians [illegible] Rev Mr Wilbur [illegible] morning [illegible] with the murderers speculating their future well [illegible] singing and prayers by the two ministers and a plain brief statement [illegible] of the law [illegible] earnest aim [illegible] place calling and [illegible]. The Indians were then told that they could make any statement and after [illegible] for a while Kype stated as follows. He first spoke in rather [illegible] terms of our method of punishment. Christ came to the world to save sinners, that he brought a good book and left it with the whites; that the whites had learned to do right but that the good book did not teach them to stick up sticks (meaning a scaffold) to hang people on, that it was wrong to hang people; that God created this world for the whites and Indians alike and that this was a good world. He said that he had his life from God and that when he was living he would leave his body here in the world but that he did not know where his spirit would go. He then spoke briefly of the assault made by him and his fellow prisoners recently on Mr York the jailer. He said that Moostanic, the one accused by the court had since the court given the [illegible] of them a bad heart; that Moostanic had during the fifteen days he remained at the jail been persuading them to kill York the jailer and the other man at the jail and told them that he would watch through the grates and let them know when Mr York would be alone at the jail. He said that Moostanic procured a rock and laid it near the jail where they could procure it when the jailer would take them out as he was accustomed to do; that he told them where it was and that Twewne did get the rock when he went out and concealed it in the jail. They then put the stone into the toe of a moccasin and then wrapped the back part of the moccasin with strips torn from a blanket, thus making a good hand [illegible]. That was the weapon with which he Kype struck Mr York on the head. He said however that they did not intend to kill York but just wanted to knock him down so they could get possession of the guns that were in the jailer's room.

Saluskin was then allowed to speak and said that he would corroborate the statement just made by Kype respecting the conduct of Moostanic, and that he had but little else to say. After being asked if there was anything unrevealed heretofore respecting the Perkins murder he said no. He was then asked if there were any others connected with them in that affair and he said there were none others than the seven heretofore spoken of.

They were then conducted to the scaffold a few rods in the back ground south of the jail. They were attended by the sheriff and deputy and jailer, also four physicians and the minister, Mr Wilbur and Abe Lincoln an interpreter. The scaffold was guarded by a company of volunteers of our citizens marshaled by Capt. Hambleton by request of the sheriff and perfect order and harmony prevailed during the entire scene.

The interpreter was then told to inform them that the time was at hand and if they had anything further to say that they could do so, and Kype then briefly said: "You all see me here, and you can hang my body, but you cannot hang my spirit. I leave my body here in this world but I don't know where my spirit will go."

Saluskin then spoke and said: "Whites and Indians, I greet you all as brothers and sisters. I have a good feeling towards you all. I will leave my body in the world and my spirit will go to a better world."

After an eloquent prayer by Father Wilbur the black caps and ropes were adjusted and the trap fell. After they were pronounced by the attending physicians to be dead their bodies were surrendered by the sheriff to their friends who took them away for interring according to their own customs.

Seattle, Nov 26 1879

The Sisters fair which opens in this city this evening will be largely attended.

Messrs Stetson & Post are about to start a grist mill in connection with their planing mills in this city.

The mill at Milton, just opposite Seattle is undergoing an overhauling preparatory to starting [illegible] in a few weeks.

Six hundred thousand feet of sawlogs were recently sold at Olympia for $5 per thousand, the highest price obtained this season.

Everything is now being got in readiness for opening the Renton Talbot coal mine. The company will commence taking out coal in about six weeks it is expected.

The concert given by the Ladies Working Society of the Congregational church at the new opera house in this city last evening was largely attended and a pronounced success in every respect.

Part of the machinery for the North Seattle Barrel Factory was shipped from San Francisco on the schooner Excelsior which sailed on the 15th inst and will arrive here some time during the latter part of the present week or next.

The Hon Mr McGilvra of Tacoma upon his return from the territorial legislature was tendered a grand banquet by his constituents, during the course of which he was made the recipient of a handsome gold watch, tendered him in appreciation of his public services.

Mr C B Shattuck has about closed a contract with the Carbon River Coal Company for opening their mine. According to the terms of the contract the mine must be producing coal at the rate of 300 tons per day inside of twelve months. The construction of the proposed railroad from Puyallup up to the mines will be commenced in a few weeks.

Home Truth for Hendricks

[From the Indianapolis News (Ind.)]

If Mr Tilden is "laid out" he will take precious good care to lay out any rival that his assassins sympathize with. It may be all that will be left in his power and if he doesn't use it his nature will have to undergo a marvellous change. Tammany's help will be a serious drawback to any rival. It will kill Mr Hendricks who is notoriously Tammany's pet. In our judgment he is more effectually laid out than Mr Tilden. He can have no rational hope of carrying New York against the Tilden influence and Potter's own case is too uncertain to make him a saving auxiliary on the ticket. Hendricks and Potter would be no worse than Hendricks and [illegible] for the weakness of the head would paralyze the tail. In the present [illegible] of Republican [illegible] it is very doubtful if Mr Hendricks could carry Indiana. In any event he has no chance in New York and he can't be elected without New York nor can he in any reasonable possibility be nominated even.

THURSDAY MORNING NOV 27 1879

THANKSGIVING.

The modern thanksgiving is observed both in its devotional and social ways. It had an origin [illegible] rather curious and interesting. In a time of great despondency among the settlers of New England it was proposed in one of their public assemblies says Dr Franklin to proclaim a fast. A plain farmer whose spoke of the wearying [illegible] heaven with their complaints, reviewed the mercies showed that they had much to be thankful for and moved that instead of a day of fasting they should appoint a day of thanksgiving. Franklin judging from the [illegible] thought the old farmer's suggestion were quite happy. The new one was strictly a beautiful sentiment, but the manifestation of a strong religious feeling. The inauguration of thanksgiving day was an avowal that there is a Providence superintending all. The extension of the New England feast was a natural growth and is one of the marks of the great influence which New England has extended on the national morals and the national mind. But the influence of New England ideas has not been thus potent because they had their origin in a particular locality but because they are a part of the harvest of seed sown long ages before. For years some sections of our country refused to recognize thanksgiving day because of its Yankee origin and these prejudices are not yet extinct. But it may be said that the occasion has almost become one of national observance and certainly it is regarded in a very different light from that in which it was held in the beginning when large numbers looked on it with disfavor believing that holidays generally were the suggestion of the devil and no good could come of them. Time has mellowed these austere and gloomy feelings or dispelled them entirely; hence thanksgiving day is a very different thing from what it was when first instituted in the colony of Massachusetts Bay. If, on the one hand it is less devotional it is on the other an occasion for more cheerful feelings and a larger charity. In the cities the street waif, and even the criminal in his cell are made the happier for a day; the occasion opens the theater as well as the church door, and waves of gladness are often made to enter the dreariest abodes. The day stimulates social intercourse and charitable endeavor so that even those who are not devotional enough to feel that they have anything to be thankful for nevertheless are made better by it. There will be at least some grateful feeling for the day itself,—a day thrown in between days of work. And there will be feasting, let us hope in moderation, varying the monotony of hasty meals; a meeting of familiar faces about the table, at which some of them may be too often strangers, and altogether an unbending of the strained energies; a warming of the social and family feeling, a kindling of the sense of brotherhood which in life's long marches and hard battles is apt to become dim or fade away entirely. There are few so cynical as not to see in our public life some cause for gratitude. The apparent settlement of various financial and other questions shows that we are making some progress towards a broader national morality. In material prosperity there has been an undoubted growth and there will be more if we continue to deserve it.

PENSIONS

The address delivered by J. A. Bentley, commissioner of pensions, before the grand army of the republic at Philadelphia on the 24th ult, is published. Some of its statements are of particular value for the information they furnish on an important subject. It is shown that at the commencement of the rebellion there were only 8636 pensioners, requiring a little more than $800 000 annually for their payment. On the 30th of June last there were 244,648 pensioners, requiring annually for their payment $30,000 000.

The pensions are paid four times each year, the quarterly payments falling due on the 4th day of each of the months of September, December, March, and June of each fiscal year. The whole number of separate payments for a year is nearly 900 000, or 3000 per day. There are now lying in the office upwards of 180,000 unsettled original claims. Forty or fifty thousand of these have once been rejected by the office for one reason or another, but have been revived since the passage of the arrears act last January.

An impression has been pretty generally created that a great proportion of the pension list is fraudulent, it is often stated at 30 per cent. But the commissioner says he has given this subject very careful attention and is confident this is a very extravagant estimate. Yet he believes it practicable to reduce the annual pension appropriation $3 000 000 by eliminating frauds and reducing the rate of pension when too high a rate is being paid.

Notwithstanding the great amount of work of a merely clerical character connected with the settlement of the claims the principal and important duties of the pension office are in their nature judicial, and call for the exercise of a sound judgment and a keen understanding. They consist of considering and weighing the testimony presented to prove the claims, and upon it deciding the right of the cases. It has been found by experience that in spite of all efforts fraudulent applications based on false testimony will sometimes be successful. But the commissioner presents the outline of a system for taking testimony by commissions in the several pension districts which, if enacted into a law would pretty certainly check further frauds of this character.

THE CENSUS

For information of an inquirer in Union county and others who may be concerned we state that the supervisors of the census have not yet been appointed and will not be till after congress assembles as the nominations have to be confirmed by the senate. The enumerators will be nominated by the supervisors and confirmed by the superintendent of the census or the secretary of the interior. The superintendent authorizes the statement that the entire work of taking statistics will be performed within the single month of June next. The bureau will employ about 20 000 persons to do it. There will be two distinct departments of the census. First the enumeration proper which includes the count of population with the ordinary social and vital statistics; second the collection of statistics of manufactures, agriculture, mines, fisheries and social statistics such as taxation, wealth, public indebtedness, [illegible] churches, schools, newspapers, paupers, [illegible] and criminals [illegible]. Originally the census was [illegible] for the purpose of determining [illegible] representation and each house [illegible] was counted as a unit. Though the number of persons was reported [illegible] even names and ages were taken. The law of 1850 was the first which gave a wide scope to the work. [illegible] country was the first to introduce a [illegible] census beginning in 1790 [illegible] followed in 1801.

The experience heretofore had will be of great advantage in making the new enumeration. New and improved methods borrowed largely from other countries will be introduced. Special reports are now under preparation by scientific investigators on the [illegible] the building stone and [illegible] forest wealth and the [illegible] her interest, the cultivation [illegible]. The results of the census are anticipated with eager interest by reason of the desire to learn of our commercial and industrial progress as a nation and also to know how it will affect the political representation of the country owing to changes in the distribution of population.

SOUND FINANCIAL POLICY

Eastern journals are anticipating certain recommendations on financial affairs in the message of the president and the report of the secretary of the treasury. The president is said to be of opinion that the greenbacks should be gradually withdrawn from circulation and he will ask congress to pass a law immediately to carry this recommendation into effect. It is understood that Secretary Sherman will also discuss the subject of legal tenders and will recommend legislation which will lead to a certain extent to their withdrawal and cancellation. These are very wise and proper recommendations. The treasury of the United States should not be maintained as a bank of issue. It cannot be said that resumption is completely settled and established against all contingencies till the greenbacks are redeemed. But it may be doubted whether the present congress will authorize their redemption and cancellation. The rag money element is strong in that body and fully controls the democratic majority. It will be proper however to make an issue on this question so that the country may see clearly what party opposes the return to principles of sound finance. It is reported also that the president will request congress to pass a law limiting the further coinage of silver dollars. If the country would not like to find itself in a year or two more wholly on a silver basis this recommendation also should be heeded. And yet we can hardly expect the Cheap John financiers of the present congress to adopt the rational financial policy contained in these suggestions.

The pamphlet of Charles Francis Adams Jr on the Quincy method of teaching in the public schools calls out the just remark that the radical error in the present cumbersome method of teaching writing is in supposing that children in learning to write should acquire a technical knowledge of the principles of letters as set forth in the Spencerian or any other system of writing. These so called writing systems are useful enough in their way as a means of aiding the teacher of penmanship in presenting to the pupil letters of a uniform size and appearance, but to impose a mass of details upon the memory of a child with regard to horizontal curves, base lines, the group of looped letters and in particular the horizontal loop is worse than nonsense. A youth with a special talent for the art of writing might perhaps with profit be drilled in separating letters into principles when well along in years, but to assume that the mass of children should be subjected to like treatment and at an early age is an egregious error.

The papers have it that Richard Smith editor of the Cincinnati Gazette who was at Chicago on the occasion of the Grant reception there was requested to declare himself on the proposition to make Grant the republican candidate for the presidency. Being thus solicited for an opinion he said pointedly that the nomination of Grant was something which the republican party could neither afford to confer nor Grant to accept. The margin in Ohio is too slim to risk a division in the party, which would be sure to follow the nomination of Grant. He suggested that the genius of Grant is military, and that congress, without party division, would delight to provide for him by making him marshal of the army.

Journals of Athens publish the returns of the last census made in Greece. The population of the kingdom which in 1869 was 1 509 450, had increased by 1879 to 1,701 793. In 1838 when the first census was taken the number of inhabitants was 849 30[illegible]. In 1860 Athens had a population of 5[illegible] 000 inhabitants, in 1879 it has increased to 7[illegible] 000. About half a century ago Athens was only a village, now it is one of the great cities in the east.

The great rise in the value of Northern Pacific stock has brought the bankrupt estate of Jay Cooke & Co clear out of debt and left it a surplus. It is now shown that every creditor will receive his money in full and that for every $1000 of indebtedness there are cash resources to the amount of $1 072 87. This is an astonishing result for an estate whose liabilities once amounted to $8 000 000.

The old tubs in the United States navy not requiring all the money appropriated by the last congress, Mariner Thompson will cover into the treasury $1 000 000 unused funds. This is the first instance of the kind on record and stamps the secretary as a remarkably economical man.

We have an account of the execution of the Indian murderers of Perkins and wife which took place at Yakima City on Saturday last. The tone of their remarks on the scaffold indicate that they were quite strongly opposed to capital punishment.

Anthony Comstock is the man who put the government on the track of the lottery swindles and caused the postmaster general to issue stringent orders for the suppression of lottery matter going through the mails.

CITY

BURGLARIZED—Sometime during Tuesday night the store of Mr W Beck at the corner of Alder and Front streets was entered by burglars Entrance was effected by the thieves by breaking one of the large plate glass windows A hole nearly two feet square was smashed through the glass which enabled the thieves to help themselves to whatever was within reach About $200 worth of handsome and valuable pistols was stolen. The plate glass alone was worth $. Mr. Beck's loss will not fall short of $. There is no clue to the perpetrators of this very bold robbery although should an attempt be made to dispose of any of the stolen property the crime may be traced to the guilty parties This is the fourth or fifth time that Mr Beck's store has been burglarized within the past few years

ROW—ANOTHER BROKEN WINDOW—Yesterday a row occurred in front of Wm Beck's store corner of Front and Alder streets between officer Arnold and Joseph Taylor. Some severe criminations were made by Taylor to which officer Arnold responded with much warmth In the heat of the altercation Taylor sprang inside and seizing hold of a bunch of canes, struck Arnold over the head. One of the canes broke short off the other end of which struck a plate glass window and smashed through it thus putting Mr. Beck to an additional expense of $200.

ASTORIA.—The following dispatch was received at the merchants exchange yesterday at 4 P. M. The steamer Geo Harley passed down this morning and crossed out to Ilwaco at noon Bark Real arrived at Knappton in tow of the Wonder this afternoon Weather clear light northeast

FURNACE—One of Chilson's improved brick furnace, No 10 is being placed in the First Presbyterian church Mr L I Smith the contractor The masonry work is being pushed rapidly ahead and the new furnace will be ready for service by next Sunday

REMEMBER.—Persons having business at the postoffice will bear in mind that the general delivery and carriers windows will be open from 8 to 9 o'clock A M and from 5 to 6 P M No business will be transacted in the money order or registry department during this day.

STEPPED OUT—S. Coulter & Son have not taken the St Charles hotel as reported but will continue in the management of that house until the expiration of their lease May 1 1880

DINNER—The ladies of the Taylor Street M E church will set a fine Thanksgiving dinner to-day at Good Templar hall Go and get a good square meal call at the SERVICES—There will be services at the Unitarian church corner of Yamhill and Seventh at 11 o clock to day to which the public is cordially invited.

DIVINE SERVICE.—Divine service will be held this morning at 11 o'clock in St. Stephen's Chapel, Bishop Morris officiating

DEBUT OF MISS BELLE DUBOIS

Miss Belle DuBois after an absence of years from the stage appeared last night at New Market theater at the... She came with a reputation and had a reputation to... a large audience generally viewed her... a fashionable rel... en e filled the entire dress circle and parquette of the theater and contained nearly every local musician. It was such an audience as an ordinary singer would fear and a good one. Miss DuBois's first appearance was greeted with the usual complimentary applause. Before she had finished her first song, "I got Ardi"... she had won the audience. We can not better convey an idea of her singing than in the following words written after having heard her at home last Thursday. She has a clear soprano voice of wonderful purity and compass and under perfect control. She skipped from the lowest to the highest tone and vice versa went through the most intricate vocal gymnastics and gave exquisitely delicate trills apparently without effort. The conclusion of the song was signalized by an enthusiastic burst of applause which continued for two minutes making a protracted encore Miss DuBois responded with Eckert's beautiful echo song, which was rendered with exquisite tenderness and feeling. In the second part she gave "I am Titania" from Mignon a production abounding in difficult Fioritura which—were sung clearly precisely brilliantly and called forth still more enthusiastic plaudits. Repeated calls brought the lady again to the footlights and she gave the simple ballad, "When the Bloom is on the Rye" which however is much better suited to a contralto or mezzo soprano than to her high soprano voice. The trio "Te sol quest Anima" by Miss DuBois and Messrs Atkinson and VanBeurden and the Good Night quartette from Martha by Miss DuBois Mrs Goodsell and Messrs VanBeurden and Atkinson showed lack of rehearsal and the voices did not blend at all harmoniously.

The instrumental quintette the overture of Don Juan by Mrs Elly DeFries and Messrs Vinton Rex Frank and Blankholm the tenor solo "Good Night" by Mr VanBeurden and the piano solo, Dying Poet by Mrs F W Stechhan were each well rendered Mrs Goodsell sang The Day is Done very sweetly and won a hearty encore which she acknowledged by a bow. Mr W H Kinross was down for two numbers but did not arrive from Walla Walla as expected. Mr Vinton who performed the arduous and usually unpraised duties of accompanist deserves particular mention for his excellent assistance

TUALATIN WATER WORKS PROSPECT.

Subscription Books to be Opened and Officers Elected this Week —San Francisco Capitalists Interested in the Enterprise

Mr H C Owen of Eugene who has been in San Francisco for the past ten days on business connected with the Tualatin water works, returned yesterday afternoon on the Elder. In conversation with an OREGONIAN reporter at the Clarendon Hotel last night, he stated that he had placed $270 000 stock of the company with the following San Francisco capitalists: W T Owen $50 000 C. N Felton $50 000 A. D Sharon $50 000 Geo W Grayson $50 000 H C Perkins $50 000. Mr Owen takes $60 000—in all $320,000. He will open the books of the company to morrow and officers will be elected, Mr Owen having the proxies of the San Francisco gentlemen to vote for such officers Stock will be issued and sent to the men below As soon as the necessary arrangements are completed, they will send up a civil engineer and one of their own number to survey the proposed route and make estimates. Mr Owen states that the company expect to manufacture gas on the new process which has been so successful in San Jose

Mr Owen says that during his stay in San Francisco, he was visited every evening by capitalists who plied him with questions concerning this state. They seemed especially to want information concerning the Southern Oregon mines and wild lands. Millions upon millions of capital is lying idle in San Francisco, which on account of the provisions of the new constitution of California must find employment elsewhere and capitalists look to this state for safe investments

TUALATIN WATER

PORTLAND Nov 26 1879

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I noticed a communication in your paper this morning in regard to the impurity of the water in the Tualatin river I have wondered that the attention of the press has not been called to this subject before I wish to add further my experience I was employed near your river months one summer in the neighborhood of Oswego lake and lived on the river The water there was of about the same color as strong tea and nobody would drink it nor would they use it for cooking purposes and we went across the river regularly every evening and morning in a skiff and brought our water from a spring on the other side And this is the kind of water with which the new company intends to furnish the people of Portland I give this for what it is worth hoping it may be of some good to our fellow citizens

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK

The next presidential campaign will have one important feature—it will fully express the people's verdict on the great issue between the leading political parties. For behind our government ... behind all the legislative machinery rings and petty partisan organizations is the real ruler and director of our government—the sovereign people. Every official will be brought before the tribunal and all proved unworthy will be ignominiously sent home to tend their farms and their own business. The people will endorse nothing whatever be it a president or a pill that has not proved itself genuine and true. That the American people have so highly acknowledged by their votes and patronage the genuine and valuable Dr Pierce's Family Remedies is proof conclusive that their use fully justifies the claims for them. No other proprietary medicines sell so largely. The Golden Medical Discovery is a sovereign remedy for all scrofulous, blood and skin diseases. It has pretty thoroughly superseded the old fashioned sarsaparillas. The Favorite Prescription has no equal as a remedy for those chronic weaknesses and painful affections peculiar to women. Pleasant Purgative Pellets sugar coated and scarcely larger than mustard seeds are now the popular laxative and cathartic. Sold by druggists

FOR MUSIC

Oh would that love could die
And memories cease to be
That a foolish kiss and a sigh
Were nothing more to me

Oh would that a summer day
A stroll mid the rustling corn
Could pass from my heart away
Like the little clouds at morn

Ah me for the starry night
The glow worm under the rose
The [illegible] in the fading light
Which only one sad heart knows

Ah me for the [illegible]
The love in a parting look
The watching of weary eyes
For the morrow that never broke

AUNT HARRIET'S SAMP PUDDING

A GOOD THANKSGIVING STORY

"I declare for it" sighed Aunt Harriet, sinking wearily into the splint bottomed rocking chair, setting her slippered feet upon the stove hearth and clasping her hands in front of her knees, "I declare for it if I don't think Thanksgivin' day a matter of cookin' and eatin' is the most foolish of all our New England notions. Every year since I can remember the programme has been the same. The whole month of November spent in preparing for this grand gastronomical exhibition, as Parson Pendleton used to call it. I have never in my life been away from this house on a Thanksgivin' day, and every year we've been overrun with company. Father wouldn't think 'twas Thanksgivin', I s'pose, if the house wasn't full. For my part I should like a change, either to go somewheres Thanksgivin' day and be waited on or stay at home by myself."

"Oh, Harriet, I wouldn't talk so," remonstrated grandmother, who was taking off her false front and putting on her white muslin nightcap. "You know the work of preparin' for dear ones is pleasant work. Our social family gatherin's make us all better and happier. Your father would feel dreadfully cut up to hear you run on in this complainin' way about makin' Thanksgivin'. Of course you are tired to night, but don't think about that, count over your mercies and think how much you have to be thankful for."

"Hum," went on the wearied spinster in her peculiar nasal tone, "I could make thanksgivin' in my heart so that it would sing for joy without makin' such an ado about my stomach."

Reaching down and opening the oven door, a suggestive and delicious odor as of baking fowls and browning pastry burst forth, filling the roomy kitchen. She peeped inside the oven for a moment, turned around one of the pans, using a corner of her long, straight, blue print apron for a holder, and then, shutting in the culinary wonders which were to grace to-morrow's dinner, she continued:

"I have spent three weeks in house cleaning, only to get everything in apple pie order just in time to be turned topsy turvy. Every room is full to night, and I must stretch my tired frame on a lounge. It never makes any difference where Harriet sleeps, she can be tucked anywhere. Last night I was up till 11 o'clock to get the pound cake baked. Night before last it was the mince and pumpkin pies. To night it will be 11 before these chicken pies are browned fit to be seen, and flat midnight before I can get to bed. I am tired and sick of the great national stuffing day, and for my own part shan't want a mouthful of the nice food that the pantry shelves are groaning under. I would far rather have a bowl of samp and milk, and a day of leisure along with it."

The bedroom door just behind the speaker was unlatched, and John and his wife, who had late in the evening driven in from the west part of the town so as to be at home to breakfast Thanksgiving morning, and who had been put into Harriet's room, heard every word of this tirade.

"We'll have them all next year if we get the house fixed over," whispered Jane under the blue-and-white coverlid, and John nodded assent, whispering in his turn:

"It's hard on Harriet, to be sure."

The project was broached next day, was agreed to by all hands, and throughout the year it was talked of as a settled thing that their next Thanksgiving reunion should be held at John's.

"Father and mother are to come over on Monday," said John's wife, as the festival season drew near, "and on Wednesday, when the preparations are nearly or quite complete, we will send the team for Harriet."

"I'll not make that amount of trouble for anybody," replied the maiden sister, who was, in fact, the mainstay at the homestead. "If I conclude to join in your dinner, I will, on Thursday mornin' walk over through the woods in time to go to meetin' with you."

Grandpa Buxton's farm consisted of a long strip lying between two rivers, with a wooded hill about midway of its length. Grandpa lived in an old farm house in the eastern meadow, and John had fitted up an elegant new residence on the bank of the west river. So the old couple were not to leave the ancestral acres, although it was four miles from one house to the other, around the point of the hill, and two miles by the foot and bridle path across the woods.

On the sunny, smoky Monday morning preceding Thanksgiving, grandpa and grandma started with old Dobbin and the chaise to jog around the mountain road to John's. And on that same Monday morning in the far west a pretty, plump little woman with her husband and five children started in an ox cart to go the fifteen or twenty miles to the nearest railway station where six of them were to take the cars for the east to spend Thanksgiving, while the father retraced his wearisome way to the lonely log cabin on the forest prairie.

It was a rather dowdy and an old-fashioned company, as might have been expected, so far as clothes were concerned, but attractive in their rosy, healthy, buoyant good nature. They were all as happy as happy could be—from 12 year old Johnny to baby Hat—for were they not journeying to the wonderful homestead where mamma lived when she was a little girl? and where the scenes of all mamma's stories were laid—"mamma's splendid stories which were better than any fairy stories or any stories printed in books or papers."

On, on they whirled, and it was Wednesday afternoon, yet these children who had never in their lives been five miles from their own clearing, were not cross, or sour or out of patience, although they were dreadfully tired, and oh, so hungry! for the sizable lunch basket, well filled when they started from home, had quite given out, and the reinforcements bought in haste at wayside restaurants not very filling.

"Only fifty miles from grandpa's now," and the plump little woman marshaled her brood about her as they made the last change of cars. "Only two hours of precious time." But alas for human calculations there was a connection to be made at an out-of-the way junction on the line. The eastern train was late. Trains are always late the night before Thanksgiving, there are so many happy souls going home. "These trains are mail trains, they must meet and our train must wait."

"'Twill make a pretty late supper time," said Charlie.

"I should think it was supper time now," cried Mary, poking around in the bottom of the empty hamper.

"I suppose there is some place near by where I can get a lunch for the children," said the pleasant mamma to affable Conductor Carroll who came through the car just then.

"I'm sorry to tell you, madam, that the restaurant has been discontinued and the hotel burned down a week ago or so. You can see the ruins just over the brook there."

A glance at the ashes and embers of what was once a hotel was not very satisfying to five hungry juveniles and mamma, for the first time since she bade her husband good by, without a cloud on her brow said:

"We will play we have got to grandpa's and see how nearly our real getting there will be like our play. I will begin, now. What would I like for supper, Sister Harriet? Oh a cup of tea for me and plenty of milk and bread for the children." "Wall I declare for't Sister Susan, I guess these children won't eat bread and milk at grandpa's Thanksgivin' after travelin' three mortal days and nights."

And the plump little mamma changed her voice in the last clause in a droll nasal imitation of her sister, which made the children laugh.

"What would you like, my dears?"

"I can smell all sorts of goodies," [illegible] Mary, sniffing until her little person [illegible] red, "and I should like pumpkin pie [illegible] agreeable."

"Chicken for me, [illegible]," [illegible] John promptly.

"Mince pie," said [illegible] Jim.

"Pudding cake [illegible] apples nuts [illegible] corn balls roast beef roast pork [illegible] quail ham ducks most anything [illegible] in the house," cried Charlie [illegible] while they all laughed at little Hat's [illegible] "Goo goo" and made her little fat hands [illegible] in a patty cake [illegible].

The three or four passengers in the far end of the car looked up from their books and papers and smiled at the merry little group.

Meanwhile Aunt Harriet in the great [illegible] talked to the [illegible] a big basket packed full of Thanksgivin' fixins. "I'll see," she said as she put in the last mince pie and loaf of cake, "if I can't have just as thankful a heart as if the house was full of goodies. I mean to try it for once and eat puddin' and milk as I have often wished I [illegible] and see if I don't enjoy it just as well."

So she filled a great quantity of corn meal of the kind that southern people call hominy and New England folks call samp and put it in the big dinner pot, proceeded to make a pudding. It required a good deal of stirring and skimming and kept her pretty busy for two or three hours. The [illegible] swelled and swelled until the kettle was nearly full.

"I declare for't," said she to the cat, "for the [illegible] what possessed me to make a lot of puddin'. But if I don't want it [illegible] myself the hogs will [illegible]" and fetching a bowl of milk from the [illegible] sat down in the splint bottomed chair, set her felt slippered feet [illegible] piece of the stove and proceeded to eat her supper.

"I declar for't," said she to the dog who lay on the rug at her feet, "I feel as lonesome as if everybody was dead, as if everybody was [illegible] I was left on earth alone. I [illegible] have [illegible] I could like a [illegible] to [illegible] with but I wouldn't own it to anybody that would talk, but you won't tell no tales. I'm as ashamed as a whipped dog, and feel as cheap as dirt every time I think what day it is and how we've been prospered in every way. [illegible] There's no company in the house and none likely to come, and nothin' cooked up and no Thanksgivin' smell about the house, and worst of all, father and mother sent off out from under their own ruff. Harriet, you're a sour selfish crabbed old maid, and I'm ashamed on ye. Take the Bible and see if ye can't find suthin' to get ye into a better state o' mind."

So she strode into mother's room after the family Bible and behold! it was gone.

"They've taken it with 'em to John's and all the Thanksgivin' along with it." She took a look at the made up bed with its pieced up quilt and said again, "It seems as if everybody was dead," and went out and shut the door behind her.

"What if somebody should come?" she soliloquized next, taking up the cat, "but there won't. There ain't nobody to come only who's invited to John's, excepting Sister Susan, poor dear precious child, away off there in the wilds, she'll never come home again I presume," and Harriet laid her hands on her knees and thought of the day Susan was born and of the day she was married, and cried a little, and then dropped off into a nap from which she was aroused by a subdued bustle near the back door.

Getting up and lifting a corner of the curtain she peeped out and saw, by the light of the full moon, a wagon driving out of the yard, a trunk—or basket—a tallish boy, a short girl, two more children coming up the walk and a plump little woman with a baby in her arms just stepping upon the doorstone.

"Susan!" gasped Harriet, quickly unbuttoning and opening the door, and catching the surprised rosy little woman in her arms. They both cried a little but Harriet meanwhile put Susan into the splint bottomed chair, took off her bonnet and smoothed her hair. Then she wiped her eyes, asked after the absent husband, kissed the children, took off their things, making a mental calculation of how she should get them all dressed before Sunday.

"I knew we should find you up," said Susan, looking around the familiar kitchen. "I remember how the baking used to drag the night before," and she gave a little sniff. Smelling nothing suggestive of fancy cookery, she said she believed she had managed to take a cold in some way. At this the children, each in turn, sniffed and looked curiously at each other.

"We won't let any one know that you have come until morning," said Harriet, in her decided way, "and then we will have a general surprise at breakfast."

"They are all well—father and mother?" asked Susan, anxiously.

"Never better! Now, what will you have for supper?" That was just what had been said in their play, in the car, and the children pricked up their ears.

"Oh, a cup of tea for me and plenty of milk and bread for the children," said the plump and rosy mamma, carrying on her part of the play according to programme. But Aunt Harriet instead of asking them what they would like, seized upon the idea of milk, and exclaimed:

"Yes, yes, milk for the children to be sure, of course it will be the very best thing for them after the journey. You used to be fond of samp, Susan."

"I should think so, and I have never seen any since I went away."

The children looked disappointed but they enjoyed their supper, and thought and said they had never tasted anything so delicious as the first meal at grandpa's.

"You see," said Aunt Harriet as she was preceding them up to bed just as the clock struck 11, "it's a good appetite and a thankful heart that makes a Thanksgivin' supper, after all."

"Yes," agreed Johnnie, "that's so, but after all, I'm glad we're going to have the turkey, goose, ducks and chicken fixin's to-morrow."

"Beginning with stewed chicken and pumpkin pie for breakfast," said Mary.

"You see I have told them all about it," said Susan apologetically, as she carried the baby up the stairs she had last come down as a bride. "If you're crowded Harriet, you can make up a bed on the floor for the boys."

"There are two beds in this room; can you manage here?" replied Harriet, opening the door of one of the spick and span front chambers.

"Oh certainly."

"Then go to bed and to sleep, and don't hurry up until I call you in the morning," and, bidding the little group a loving good night, she hurried down stairs, quickly donned walking shoes, shawl and hood, slipped out the back door, locked it securely after her, put the key under the door sill and started across lots for John's.

"It's lucky I haven't been baking for a fortnight," she said, and then she continued, "if I had the folks would all be at home where they'd orter be and I shouldn't have ter go prowling off after 'em. I don't see as I've made much."

Jane was taking her last chicken pie out of the oven, and the clock was striking 12 as Harriet stalked into the kitchen.

John heard her voice and got out of bed and came out in his night-gown to hear the good news, for Susan was the youngest sister and the pet.

"I'll go over and bring them all around here to breakfast," said John eagerly. "It don't seem as if I could wait until morning."

"I will tell you what shall be done," said John's wife. "We won't say a word about it but will carry our fixings all over home. Do you suppose I'm going to have that dear child and them come [illegible] across the continent to Thanksgiving at grandpa's, only to be sent away from the old homestead to one of the neighbors? By no means."

Then, indeed, Harriet broke down and cried in good earnest. And what was a wonderful thing for her to do, she put her arms around her sister in law's neck and kissed her heartily.

Thanksgiving morning opened bright and fair. When Aunt Harriet in a pretty flowered wrapper looked in to awake the travelers she found them up and dressed. Grandpa and grandma, John and his wife and all the rest were waiting to receive them at breakfast and everything went on just as it was set down in the "play."

"There are Thanksgiving smells enough this morning," said Mary. "I guess we did have colds last night."

But all kept their own counsel, and the plump little mother has not yet ceased wondering how it happened that Harriet should have been making that immense samp pudding on Thanksgiving eve.—[illegible]
